

Central Intelligence Agency

Washington, D. C. 20505

DIRECTORATE OF INTELLIGENCE APRIL/MAY 1984 *

CENTRAL AMERICAN MONTHLY REPOR	T #9	25 X 1
Perspective
Napoleon Duarte's election as President of El Salwith it opportunities for moderates to exert greater in policy, to redefine and improve the executive-legislative to exploit increasingly pronounced divisions within the Nevertheless, Duarte will have to deal with a constellar at best is uneasy with his reformist tendencies and at vesek his ouster. Thus, his major initial challenge will be anxieties of some of these forces and thereby reduce the more incorrigible to foment unrest.	fluence over national ve relationship, and insurgent alliance. tion of forces that vorst will actively e to lessen the	25 X 1
Duarte's relatively narrow victory over extreme to D'Aubuisson increases the chances that he will harness rigidity and impetuosity and take a conciliatory approaright. In this, his relations with the military will be ke	his ideological ch to the moderate	20/(1
he probably will press for these changes only consultation with the high command.		25X 25X
*This memorandum was prepared by the Central America coordinated with the Directorate of Operations. Publication of normally would have appeared in early May, was delayed to in election returns from El Salvador and Panama. The next issue end of June. Questions and comments are welcome and should Middle America-Caribbean Division, ALA,	of this issue, which clude analysis of key will be published at the discounty be addressed to Chief,	25X1
-	ALA-M-84-100466  Copy Z7 of 6	25X1
		25X1

The US Embassy, meanwhile, has corrected a misquote of a statement by Duarte following the 6 May balloting in which he was alleged to have publicly claimed that military harassment of the Christian Democrats had reduced his margin of victory. The Embassy notes that Duarte did not refer to military personnel in his remarks, but rather to D'Aubuisson's party. We believe that most military elements, while somewhat uneasy with their first honestly and directly elected commander-in-chief, are resigned to a new relationship with civil authority. To preserve this relationship, however, Duarte will have to take a consultative approach to any proposals for reform of the security apparatus, while rejecting querrilla demands for power sharing and reorganization of the military.

25X1

While these initial signs of improved relations between Duarte and the armed forces are encouraging, other signals are less so. Over the past few months, Duarte has done little to allay the anxieties of the private sector concerning his policies, according to the US Embassy. Moreover, he has appeared aloof from the National Conciliation Party, even after its leaders had refused to endorse D'Aubuisson in the runoff, thus virtually guaranteeing a Christian Democratic victory. With his party holding only 24 of 60 seats in the Assembly, Duarte as President will require the support of the Conciliationists and other moderate rightist elements if he is to avoid legislative paralysis and create a more viable centrist political force.

25X1

His chief antagonist in such an effort will be D'Aubuisson, who appears increasingly bitter, according to the Embassy, and whose backers view their political problems in terms of a vast conspiracy led by US officials, the Central Election Council, and local labor unions. Embassy reporting indicates that extreme rightists believe the National Conciliationists threw the election to Duarte at US behest. To the extent the Conciliationists did support Duarte, we judge their motivation reflects fear of jeopardizing US military and economic assistance as well as their desire to supplant D'Aubuisson's party as the major opposition force in the 1985 Legislative Assembly elections.

25X1

D'Aubuisson probably is also anxious over his party's failure to pick up additional political strength since the 1982 Constituent Assembly election. While D'Aubuisson received 46 percent in the 6 May balloting, he attracted only 29 percent in round one—virtually the same as he received two years ago and an ominous sign for the extreme right in terms of its ability to broaden its appeal. Rather than prompting D'Aubuisson stalwarts to examine their party's organizational and ideological shortcomings, however, such signs are likely to reinforce the party's martyr—syndrome and cause it to resume its obstructionist role in the Assembly.

25X1

D'Aubuisson, as the leader of the opposition, will scrutinize any overture the Duarte government makes regarding dialogue with the insurgents. We believe that he, in an effort to generate fears concerning formal negotiations leading to power-sharing, will constantly remind the body politic of the President-elect's apparent reluctance to deliver harsh rhetorical attacks against the guerrillas during the election campaign.

25X1

Doubtless aware of this danger, Duarte nevertheless may see the guerrillas' failure to offer a coordinated strategy against the elections as another sign of their growing—and exploitable—disunity.

25X1

non-Marxist political leaders have considered participation in the electoral process, and Duarte is likely to see the 1985 Assembly election as a possible means of further eroding leftist unity.

25X1

Meanwhile, however, the insurgent alliance will continue its efforts to discredit the election, a tactic currently aided by D'Aubuisson's last minute attempt to cast doubt on the outcome by alleging voting irregularities. Nevertheless, even hardline guerrilla elements are likely to be worried by the strong popular repudiation of their cause and its potential for weakening support for the insurgents abroad, particularly in Western Europe. Of particular concern to the guerrillas may be indications that, as in the 1982 elections, attempts to intimidate the populace are counterproductive. This was particularly pronounced in the eastern department of San Miguel, where, according to US military officials, terrorist attacks following the 25 March balloting were designed to inhibit the vote in the second round. The guerrilla tactic apparently had the opposite effect, however, as the turnout on 6 May in San Miguel was 15 percent higher than in the first round of balloting.

25X1

EL SALVADOR

Political

National attention throughout April and May focused on the runoff election between Christian Democrat Napoleon Duarte and extreme rightist Roberto D'Aubuisson. Final election figures for the 6 May contest, as reported by the US

25X1

•

Declassified in Part - Sanitized Copy Approved for Release 2012/01/24 : CIA-RDP86M00886R0012003400	013-1 25X
· · · ·
Embassy, give Duarte 53.6 percent of the vote with 1.4 million valid ballots cast. According to Embassy reporting, D'Aubuisson's backers are bitter at the outcome, particularly as their candidate carried 10 of the country's 14 departments, though losing the population centers to Duarte by substantial margins.  Throughout the campaign, Duarte did little to placate the right over the policies his administration would follow. For example, he refrained from strong criticism of the guerrillas, from publicly promising to rule out some form of power-sharing with the	25) insurgent alliance, or from specifically addressing the concerns of the private sector.  Duarte's mercurial personality and reformist tendencies will cause the military to scrutinize his actions carefully.	25 25
Furthermore, the Embassy says the private sector has resigned itself to a Duarte government, although some business leaders are predicting a two-month hiatus in investment until the Christian Democrats' policies become clear. There are no indications that businessmen plan to leave the country as a result of Duarte's victory, according to the Embassy.	25X 25X1
Military activity was at a somewhat reduced level as both sides geared up for the 6 May Presidential runoff. The Army, as it did during the first round, conducted aggressive sweep operations to keep the guerrillas off balance before returning to garrisons shortly before the balloting. The insurgents, for their part, conducted sporadic attacks and harassment actions throughout the period aimed at reducing voter turnout.
	25X
	25 X 1
Declaration in Part Sonitized Conv. Approved for Palesco 2012/01/24 : CIA PDP96M00996P0012003400	25X1

NICARAGUA

Political

Church-state conflict, heavy fighting with the insurgents, and the continuing threat of an election boycott have increased tensions and hardened positions between the Sandinistas and their internal opposition. In a speech in mid-April, Interior Minister Borge declared the entire country a war zone. On May Day, Agriculture Minister Wheelock—a Sandinista Directorate moderate—cautioned that the recent relaxation of some restrictions was being abused by "local reactionaries." Meanwhile, the US Embassy reports that Sandinista mobs resumed intimidation by disrupting the inauguration of a trade school by an opposition labor union.

25X1

The Catholic bishops' call for a national dialogue between the government and all opposition groups—including the insurgents—clearly identified the Church with opposition parties and tended to confer some legitimacy on the guerrillas. Stung by this challenge, the regime responded with harsh denunciations of Archbishop Obando y Bravo and the Church hierarchy. Catholics demonstrated their support for Obando by turning out in large numbers for Good Friday services, and the procession was marked by some apparently spontaneous anti-government incidents. We believe the Church probably will speak out strongly on electoral freedom in coming months, making additional conflict likely.

25X1

Recent Embassy reporting indicates that the political opposition believes that popular discontent over economic conditions, military conscription, and relations with the Church have strengthened its position, and it has assumed an increasingly hard line in dealing with the government. The largest opposition party, the Democratic Conservatives, has joined the opposition umbrella coalition. According to the US Embassy, the opposition was planning to give the FSLN a deadline for meeting demands it made last December for greater freedom, including suspension of press censorship and the state of emergency, dialogue with the insurgents, and separation of party and state. We believe the government will not meet most of those conditions and probably will proceed with the elections with or without the opposition. Nevertheless, the chairman of the Supreme Electoral Council recently indicated that the state of emergency may be relaxed on 2 July, and the regime could reduce press censorship after the Council of State approves a media law. Meanwhile, the Sandinistas have begun to solicit technical and material assistance for the balloting from Western Europe.

25X1

Military

Clashes between government forces and anti-Sandinista insurgents—on the upswing in March—continued to increase during April and early May. Managua faced its most serious challenge to date when Eden Pastora's Democratic Revolutionary Alliance temporarily captured the small southeastern port of San Juan del Norte in mid-April. Although the Sandinistas downplayed the loss, about 90 percent of the town's buildings were destroyed by Sandinista airstrikes and intense

25X1

25X1

5

assified in Pa	rt - Sanitized Copy Approved for Release 2012/01/24 : CIA-RDP86M00886R001200340013	3-1 25
4.0
ground	fighting, which lasted for more than a week and finally dislodged the insurgents.	2
	By early May, the Sandinistas appeared to be gaining the upper hand against 's forces in heavy fighting along Nicaragua's southern border.	2
Castille	Nicaraguan military units were conducting cleanup operations near El	25
	The increased fighting in the south is likely to create additional border success	incidents involving Costa Rican security forces, particularly if the Sandinistas are ful in pushing large numbers of Pastora's forces back across the Rio San Juan.	2 2
governi Army a the fea a dozer where t	Meanwhile, another large group of Miskito refugees fled to Honduras in fear of nent retribution for insurgent attacks in the northeast. Other refugee reports of trocities against the civilian population in southeastern Nicaragua indicate that is of the Miskito villagers were well founded. Other press accounts indicate that people were wounded in a dawn raid on the Sandinista Army post at Sumubila he guerrillas allegedly burned the town's health center, a food warehouse, and accilities.	2
offensi Segovia in the f governi fighting The roa	n the north, the Nicaraguan Democratic Force—which launched a major new re in March—continued to press Sandinista forces across Jinotega and Nuevo during April.    both sides sustained heavy casualities ighting, and in mid-April Interior Minister Borge publicly admitted that some 219 nent troops had been killed.    heavy cocurred around Waslala, with electrical service to Matagalpa temporarily cut. d between Matagalpa and Jinotega also was closed temporarily by the Army due	25 2
	gent actions, according to a US defense attache source. Insurgent leaders to have some 2,000 armed members in Jinotega Department in early April.	2
Arms B	uildup
	Moscow and its allies continue to provide the Sandinistas with large numbers of vehicles.	2
		2
	6	25

	,
MIG fighter ai airfield is com June. during the pas	, a US defense attache source of undetermined reliability recently claimed ircraft will be introduced into Nicaragua when construction of Punta Huete appleted in October. The aircraft reportedly will be prepositioned in Cuba in construction of the airfield has accelerated at few months, suggesting that an October completion date is realistic weather remains favorable.
	GUATEMALA Political
electoral field	l is dominated by the established rightist and centrist parties that participated in been inscribed have little fin been joined by government sa	n the 1982 presidential election, several new left-of-center parties have and other leftist groups are joining them in alliances. Most leftist groups ancial backing and weak organizations, but one left-of-center alliance has a Guatemala's largest trade union confederation. Meanwhile, the asys that over 2,200,000 voters have been registered and the total may have allilion by the close of the registration drive on 10 May.
participated in been inscribed have little fin been joined by government so reached 2.5 m  We bell groups—will a Mejia will try neutrality, by	In the 1982 presidential election, several new left-of-center parties have and other leftist groups are joining them in alliances. Most leftist groups ancial backing and weak organizations, but one left-of-center alliance has a Guatemala's largest trade union confederation. Meanwhile, the may that over 2,200,000 voters have been registered and the total may have a cillion by the close of the registration drive on 10 May.  Indeed, the participation of the democratic left—including some radical and deredibility to the contest at home and abroad. Moreover, in our opinion, to insure the integrity of the election by maintaining government proscribing official abductions and assassinations of leftist participated in been inscribed have little fin been joined by government so reached 2.5 m  We bell groups—will a Mejia will try neutrality, by politicians—et turnout. Emb several month redirected again.	In the 1982 presidential election, several new left-of-center parties have and other leftist groups are joining them in alliances. Most leftist groups ancial backing and weak organizations, but one left-of-center alliance has a Guatemala's largest trade union confederation. Meanwhile, the mays that over 2,200,000 voters have been registered and the total may have a confederation by the close of the registration drive on 10 May.  In the participation of the democratic left—including some radical additional credibility to the contest at home and abroad. Moreover, in our opinion, to insure the integrity of the election by maintaining government proscribing official abductions and assassinations of leftist wenthose linked to the guerrillas—and by encouraging a large voter wassy reporting indicates the level of violence has increased over the last as, but we judge that it will not undermine the election unless it is a constant to the left-of-center parties. A more difficult problem for the participated in been inscribed have little fin been joined by government sareached 2.5 m  We bell groups—will a Mejia will try neutrality, by politicians—exturnout. Emb several month redirected aggovernment membassy report of manipulations.	In the 1982 presidential election, several new left-of-center parties have and other leftist groups are joining them in alliances. Most leftist groups ancial backing and weak organizations, but one left-of-center alliance has a Guatemala's largest trade union confederation. Meanwhile, the mays that over 2,200,000 voters have been registered and the total may have a cillion by the close of the registration drive on 10 May.  In the participation of the democratic left—including some radical add credibility to the contest at home and abroad. Moreover, in our opinion, to insure the integrity of the election by maintaining government proscribing official abductions and assassinations of leftist wen those linked to the guerrillas—and by encouraging a large voter wassy reporting indicates the level of violence has increased over the last as, but we judge that it will not undermine the election unless it is participated in been inscribed have little fin been joined by government so reached 2.5 m  We bell groups—will a Mejia will try neutrality, by politicians—exturnout. Emb several month redirected aggovernment membassy report effort by the of manipulation	In the 1982 presidential election, several new left-of-center parties have and other leftist groups are joining them in alliances. Most leftist groups ancial backing and weak organizations, but one left-of-center alliance has a Guatemala's largest trade union confederation. Meanwhile, the asys that over 2,200,000 voters have been registered and the total may have a cillion by the close of the registration drive on 10 May.  In the participation of the democratic left—including some radical did credibility to the contest at home and abroad. Moreover, in our opinion, to insure the integrity of the election by maintaining government proscribing official abductions and assassinations of leftist wen those linked to the guerrillas—and by encouraging a large voter assy reporting indicates the level of violence has increased over the last as, but we judge that it will not undermine the election unless it is a linst the left-of-center parties. A more difficult problem for the may be getting out the popular vote, particularly in rural areas where rting indicates little interest in the election. Nevertheless, a grassroots government to encourage participation could leave it vulnerable to charges and the voters, particularly the 800,000 or so Indians organized by the
participated in been inscribed have little fin been joined by government so reached 2.5 m  We bell groups—will a Mejia will try neutrality, by politicians—et turnout. Emb several month redirected aggovernment m Embassy repo effort by the of manipulatin military into Military	In the 1982 presidential election, several new left-of-center parties have and other leftist groups are joining them in alliances. Most leftist groups ancial backing and weak organizations, but one left-of-center alliance has a Guatemala's largest trade union confederation. Meanwhile, the asys that over 2,200,000 voters have been registered and the total may have a cillion by the close of the registration drive on 10 May.  In the participation of the democratic left—including some radical did credibility to the contest at home and abroad. Moreover, in our opinion, to insure the integrity of the election by maintaining government proscribing official abductions and assassinations of leftist wen those linked to the guerrillas—and by encouraging a large voter assy reporting indicates the level of violence has increased over the last as, but we judge that it will not undermine the election unless it is a linst the left-of-center parties. A more difficult problem for the may be getting out the popular vote, particularly in rural areas where rting indicates little interest in the election. Nevertheless, a grassroots government to encourage participation could leave it vulnerable to charges and the voters, particularly the 800,000 or so Indians organized by the

Declassified in Part - Sanitized Copy Approved for Release 2012/01/24 : CIA-RDP86M00886R001200340013-1

25X1

25X1

25X1

their own credibility, but disagreements on an election strategy reflect their lack of unity two of the major insurgent organizations have agreed to stop most operations during the campaign for fear of damaging the chances of the leftist parties. In our view, however, the insurgents' decision to permit the election to proceed unimpeded underscores their own inherent weakness.

all guerrilla groups have suffered substantial losses this year in the face of continuous government pressure. As a result, we believe their support and courting of several legitimate left-of-center parties is an attempt to retain some influence in an electoral process they are unable to discredit through widespread military actions.

Economic

Guatemala and the IMF appear to be heading for a major confrontation. The Fund maintains that Guatemala has fallen out of compliance with agreed-on limits to its budget deficit, and warns that the remaining $60 million in the country's standby agreement is in jeopardy. According to the US Embassy, the Fund is calling for a 10 percent tax hike, but Mejia and other senior officials have publicly repudiated tax increases. The Fund is also asking for an 11 percent spending cut, pointing to its own projections that current policies will cause a sharp deterioration in Guatemala's foreign exchange position later this year. Despite its worsening economic prospects, we do not believe the government will give in to the Fund easily, and the US Embassy indicates the confrontation could result in the ouster of some top financial officials.

25X1

HONDURAS

Political

The forced resignation of General Alvarez last month is prompting some disquiet in the military. According to the US defense attache, some officers are concerned that the civilian-military collusion in Alvarez's removal portends increased civilian interference in military affairs. These concerns are aggravated by the perception that Alvarez's replacement, General Lopez, is a weak leader and that the civilian government has been lax in its tolerance of recent leftist demonstrations. In our judgment, these concerns partly reflect the widely held belief that the absence of Alvarez's strong personality has created a power vacuum in the armed forces and suggest that Lopez will have to assert his control more firmly to preclude the development of competing power centers.

25X1

Alvarez's removal also has had regional repercussions, especially among those nations which viewed him as the main Honduran proponent of a strong anti-Sandinista policy. According to the US Embassy, a Nicaraguan representative approached a prominent Honduran businessman to convey Managua's willingness to seek a political accommodation with the Suazo government. The Embassy also reports that Panamanian Defense Chief Noriega served as a conduit for a similar message to Tegucigalpa from the Castro regime. Unaware of the Nicaraguan offer, President Suazo rejected the Cuban proposal, and we judge he will not relax his stand against the Sandinistas.

25X1

25X1

Military

Tensions between Honduras and Nicaragua reached a new high after Sandinista forces shot down a Honduran helicopter on 8 May 1984, killing all eight occupants. Tegucigalpa publicly condemned the action, withdrew its ambassador for consultations, and declared Nicaragua's ambassador persona non grata. Nevertheless, the Hondurans admitted that the helicopter had strayed off course into Nicaraguan airspace. We believe that the Hondurans will not attempt to retaliate for the incident with any significant military action. In fact, Armed Forces Commander Lopez told the US defense attache that the military will continue to act with restraint on such issues. Nevertheless, additional aircraft shootdowns are possible as Managua improves its air defenses, and skirmishes along the border are likely to continue.

25X1

COSTA RICA

Political

Relations with Nicaragua deteriorated sharply in April as Costa Rican neutrality was increasingly jeopardized by fighting between Nicaraguan troops and anti-Sandinista insurgents along the countries' common border. Early in the month, following the discovery in Costa Rican territory of a wrecked aircraft allegedly transporting arms to Eden Pastora's insurgents, the Monge government—in an apparent effort to reduce tensions—returned its ambassador to Managua. Costa Rican security forces also raided Pastora's political offices in San Jose, where they confiscated arms, closed the group's radio station, and temporarily detained several followers. Meanwhile, the government attempted to underscore its neutrality by at least temporarily prohibiting the overland transit to Nicaragua of four launches which according to the US Embassy in San Jose, had been offloaded in Costa Rica by a French merchant ship because of the mining of Nicaraguan ports.

25X1

Several attacks by Nicaraguan troops against Costa Rican towns and border posts in the north since mid-April suggest that Managua sees Monge's efforts against the anti-Sandinista forces as cosmetic. On 2 May, Monge issued standing orders to his security forces to repel incursions with gunfire, and border guards have since returned hostile Nicaraguan fire on at least two occasions. In addition, Costa Rica has bolstered its border security with increased personnel and materiel, including antiaircraft weapons and mortars.

25X1

25X1 25X1

We believe Managua probably is anxious to avoid creating a pretext for US involvement on it southern flank, and by early May the Sandinistas were making some efforts to reduce tensions, according to US Embassy reporting. Nevertheless, the Sandinistas appear increasingly concerned over Pastora's operations along their southern i i

;			47
camps and units.	ieve they will engage in They also are likely to a as they have for the la	continue their effo	ncursions against orts to intimidate	insurgent the Monge
Economic
foreign exchange of according to the U loan are likely to be on the funds, howe hike and maintenar former measure pr Central Bank is like ease off somewhat	emergency disbursemerisis this year. The IM S Embassy, and two reperence worked out soon. Between, the IMF is insisting nee of a "flexible"—i.e. to bably will win legislately to make only a toke on a devaluation requirement foreign exchange	F has accepted Comaining preconditions for San Jose will gon two additions, devalued—exchalive approval despited devaluation at I rement. Neverthes	osta Rica's letter ons on a $56 milli actually be permiled policy changes: nge rate. We belite strong oppositions and persuade	of intent, ion standby ited to draw a gas tax eve the ion, but the the Fund to
	P.	ANAMA
Political	·
voters went to the progovernment can Arnulfo Arias by or naming the winner	the Electoral Tribunal polls to select their fir didate Nicolas Barlettenly 1,713 votes. The gowhen national countingers challenged by both research.	rst civilian head of a had edged out pe overnment-control g board members o	state in 16 years rennial opposition led Tribunal was	that nominee charged with Forces Commander	nough challenges to thr r Noriega evidently beli a facade of legitimacy	ieved that he coul	to adjudication, I d ensure Barletta'	Defense s victory, reported that only the government, di	the president of the Tr ssented in the decision	ibunal, who is not to name Barletta	The US Emba considered sympa the winner.	ssy later thetic to certainly has reinformable Barletta's victory. ask citizens to with also are considering	ote—less than 1 percent orced the opposition's b The Embassy reports, in whold utility and other p g sending letters to US oncern over electoral from	elief that the gove for example, that payments to the go officials and mem	ernment used frau supporters of Aria overnment in prot bers of the intern	ed to ensure as may now est. They actional

			- :	25X1
previously had threat	ened to call for a general st	rike if it lost, but more mod	erate leaders may encourage the results of the 67 Mevertheless, early contains 40 injured, and repatient in dealing with	re Arias to refrain from inci- legislative races—still delay- lashes between the two sides nore violence could occur. I h the sporadic outbursts, we ictory has been assured.	ting action against the gover ed by appeals—are known. s resulted in one person kille While the Defense Forces ha	nment until d and more ve been	25X1 to obtain the 3 percei according to the Emb	many as seven of Panama's not of the total vote that is no assy. The leftist parties properal of them could make a de	eeded to retain their legal subably will be hurt the most	tatus, by the 3
	the elections, the controver opposition bovcott, are likely or 3 June.		ctory, and	25X1 25X1
	REGIONAL PEACE NE	GOTIATIONS
disillusionment by Ve if future sessions bog commissions came to attempted to introdu- Central Americans w suggestions for a draft to send the working of	e talks continued to make slonezuela and Colombia, and a down. Meetings of the police a standstill in early April after a resolution condemning there able to comply with the commission reports to the form	Mexican threat to abandon tical, military, and economic ter the Sandinistas unsucces US aggression. Nevertheless 30 April deadline to forward inisters met in Panama at m	Contadora working sfully the their onth's end make some final reco	Mexican foreign Minister Sep mmendations and offer alter cans believe these will include	rnatives in areas where there	e is no	25X1 and they apparently	plan to push for some bilater rel to the Central American	al treaties. The Contadora	foreign	25) of their concern about urging greater cooper Cuba, Nicaragua, and May the Cuban dema	adora foreign ministers also it the mining of Nicaraguan leation with regional peace to Honduras. According to the riche had not been delivered, he to the Sandinistas explicit	harbors. They issued a comm lks and drafted demarches to Mexican Foreign Minister, While the letter to the US	nunique o the US, as of early was not

Declassified in Part - Sanitized Copy Approved for Release 2012/01/24: CIA-RDP86M00886R001200340013-1

25X1

25X1

_11____

logistic and communications center, and that the regime take steps to assure free elections and genuine nonalignment. While several participants have said that no decision was made to bring the US and Cuba into the Contadora discussions, Panamanian Foreign Minister Ortega told the US Embassy that individual Contadora members may make "frank representations" about the need for US-Cuban dialogue. Moreover, the group as a whole is likely to approach both countries to request them to support a treaty.

25X1

COMING EVENTS IN CENTRAL AMERICA

EL SALVADOR	1 June	Inauguration of President-elect Duarte.
	30 June	Decree 207, Phase III of the Land to the Tiller Agricultural Reform, expires unless renewed by the Assembly.
NICARAGUA	2 July	Sandinista proposed date for lifting the State of Emergency and allowing limited campaign activities.
GUATEMALA	1 July	Constituent Assembly Election.
HONDURAS	late May- mid June	Grenadero I, Second Phase of joint exercises between US and Honduras.
COSTA RICA	29 May- 28 June	President Monge to visit 11 European countries.
PANAMA	3 June	Mayoral and Municipal Elections.
	late June	Defense Forces Commander Noriega to visit France.
CONTADORA	early June	Contadora Foreign Ministers to visit Central American countries to present peace recommendations.

